The War in the South-West.

St. Louis, Wednesday, July 20, 1864.

Private letters from Lexington say that from three to nine hundred bushel-bakers are in Bay County, Union troops had a fight with them on Sunday near Richmond, in which six or eight of our men were reported killed.

About 300 guerrillas were at Elk Horn on Monday. About 200 bushel-bakers killed nine citizens in Carroll county, robbed the mail-coach and passengers, and did considerable plundering last week. All the persons murdered had been in the military service, and were prominent Union men.

The St. Joseph Herald of yesterday says the city is full of refugees from the lower counties, and hundreds have come to Leavenworth and other places. The panic extends throughout the whole country. All the business houses of Western are closed, and the citizens are in great fear of a raid.

About fourteen buildings were burned at Platte City by the Union troops, including The Platte Star office, and a few other houses belonging to Union men. Col. Ford tried to save The Star office, but the fire was too great.

A letter, without date, signed by "Thornton H. Reed, commanding," was found at Platte City Station. The Rebels were about ready to concentrate there, asked for the state of things; acknowledged the defeat of the names of friends, and saying they would cross the Missouri River below Sarkeyville Ford, and the Missouri River west of Wyandotte, and accomplish their march through Kansas.

This letter shows that they intended, after a few days' lingering, to join the Rebel Army of the South, effecting their escape through Kansas.

Thornton had been in Platte and Clay counties about eight months, and recruited 1,500 men; and during this time had been aided, protected, concealed, and subsisted by the citizens of those counties.

The steamer War Eagle, on her way down the Missouri River, was fired on by guerrillas at Rockport, but no one was injured.

Appeal for Five Thousand Loyal Men to Put Down the Guerrillas in Missouri.

St. Louis, Wednesday, July 20, 1864.

Gen. Fisk, commander at St. Joseph, has issued an appeal, calling for 5,000 loyal men to rally for the protection of life and property, and assist him in exterminating the guerrillas in North-Western Missouri.

From Fortresses Monroe.

FORTRESS MONROE, Tuesday, July 19, 1864.

The steamers Parthenon and New-Jersey arrived here today from Newbern, N. C., with the 17th Massachusetts Regiment, homeward bound.

There is no news from that quarter. Maj.-Gen. Smith arrived in the steamer Adelaide this morning from Baltimore, and left for the front in a special boat.

The flag of truce steamer C. W. Thomas, with Major Buford, Assistant Commissioner of Exchange, went on the river this morning with a few prisoners.

Captivating rumors have been in circulation during the day of an attack on the army gunboat Charles Chatterlain, with Gen. Butler on board, by a masked battery of four guns, near Wilcox's Landing. Nothing definite, however, has been received.

FROM REBEL JOURNALS.

The Maryland Raid—Other War News.

The Laird Rams, &c.

From The Richmond Whig, July 16.

THE NEWS FROM MARYLAND.

The public were feverishly waiting morning additional news from the seat of operations in Maryland and the city of Columbia. The accounts we gave yesterday from The Baltimore American of the 10th, in addition to the telegraphic summary from The Washington Chronicle, were too meager in the aggregate to satisfy the curiosity of the public. The first news from the early morning were strained to catch the first report of the capture of Washington and Baltimore. Morning passed, and noon came, and yet the telegraph and the War Department were as dumb as a stone. Looking at the clock, we saw when the first news came from a later Northern paper than these already received.

At 1 o'clock, however, a gentleman, than whom there is not in the city more trustworthy, came into our editorial office. He was from the front in Virginia, and carried the Yankee breakthrough near Haverhill, and announced, upon what he regarded as the very best testimony, that our troops, with the aid of 150 Maryland and Southern troops, had taken the city of Baltimore. We immediately threw down our pen and struck up, in a style that would have done credit to an Italian opera singer—Maryland, my Maryland—and, without a moment's hesitation, determined to do one thing, have a tooth drawn, our dagger-pointed, taken, or, in a glass of soda water at the "Alabama," most probably the last.

Upon second thought it occurred to us that the steamer way to the city was not the way to the front, and we went to go at once to the War Department. And sure enough, we went, and to our mortification, learned that if Baltimore had fallen they knew nothing of it.

At this was the condition of the news at 2 o'clock p. m. A gentleman in whom much confidence is to be placed, arrived at Lynchburg Wednesday night from Fairfax county, having left there on Monday last. He states that the excitement in the immediate neighborhood of the Confederate army here in Virginia, and that so great was the fear of the Yankee Government that they were removing all the stores from Alexandria and Washington, and all the public documents and property of the Government, with great haste, and that the confusion prevailing in Washington, and the panic in a terrible state of trepidation and alarm. This intelligence, our informant obtained from gentlemen who had visited Washington, whose veracity was unquestionable.

At 3 o'clock, the rumor of the occupancy of Baltimore by our troops was again current, with some variation, but all efforts to trace it to a reliable source proved unavailing. We commenced conjecturing with great freedom, and it is not true, it ought to be, but Washington, with its corruption and pollution, needs cleansing, and it is rather than to Baltimore do we hourly look with a yearning longing that our General may have an opportunity at least to give it a thorough and complete cleansing.

At 8 o'clock last night, we finally succeeded in ventilating the rumor of the taking of Baltimore by our forces. It seems that a gentleman connected with one of the city dailies early yesterday informed a distinguished Member of Congress, known to the Tribune as a Captain on a certain Lieutenant-General's staff had been admitted the fall of Baltimore under the circumstances already described.

This paper, it was further stated, had been sent to the Government; but on inquiry again at the War Department, we found that they knew nothing whatever of it.

A gentleman who arrived last night from the North, and who came into our lines yesterday at Chester, stated that we had taken Washington with the loss of seven thousand men. Our readers will not forget that deserters usually pay their footing with something encouraging.

FROM MISSISSIPPI.

The following official dispatch from Lieut. Gen. Lee gives the latest from Mississippi.

OKLAHOMA, July 14, 1864. Gen. BRANTON HARRIS: We situated a column of the enemy under Smith yesterday, and they were ordered to retreat, causing him to burn many wagons. We could not force his wagons. The best was a good one, and I sent three hours.

FROM GEORGIA.

The Augusta Chronicle of Tuesday says that a gentleman just from Atlanta reports that Gen. Johnston burned the Chattahoochee Bridge on Saturday. Our baggage wagons, pontoon bridges, &c., have passed the bridge, and are now between that city and Decatur.

The same paper says: We are informed on good authority that Hooker's corps crossed the Chattahoochee on Saturday, and were ordered to retreat, and driven back by Hardee, who captured 50 prisoners.

GREAT MOVING.

We have it from a source entitled to the highest credit that Grant has already sent two corps of his army to the relief of Washington and Baltimore. A large quantity of artillery accompanied them.

Ulysses, it seems, begins to think that the movement north of the Potomac is something more than a cattle raid. He is either waking up or getting sober.

FROM PETERSBURG.

We have to report that yesterday the citizens of Petersburg enjoyed the usual amount of shelling, and that the city was in a state of alarm. The Yankees, without success, through days of truce, to ascertain what we are doing.

FROM EAST NORTH CAROLINA.

The Rebel Confederate of the 13th, has some recent intelligence from Newbern, by which it is informed that the late Yankee raid in Onslow turned out badly for the Yankees. It appears that they divided their force into two columns, and that they were driven back, killing an orderly sergeant and two or three privates, and wounding many others.

Gold went from 30 to 35 at one leap in Newbern, and on the 20th was 35 at one leap in Newbern. The Yankees that came out about the 1st of January, for the purpose of robbing the abandoned land around Newbern, have made rather a poor business of it. Most of them have been killed and gone home, while those who remain are making arrangements to retreat of the same season as possible. They say that the downward tendency of their currency is the cause, and all of them agree that a general crash must take place soon. They hated negroes and the very lowest order of traitors, and supported their cotton and sugar farms, and they hoped that they would be able to do nothing but happen to their currency.

The 5th Massachusetts was about to leave, their term of enlistment having expired. Great efforts were made to induce them to re-enlist, but they refused to do so. This is the regiment that was at the battle of Gettysburg. The regiment had been on patrol duty at Newbern since the death of Lincoln, at Sharpsburg, where they were badly cut up, and sent back to Newbern.
